A Junior Web Developer, that has sailed around the world serving in the US Navy for six years providing fresh water through disaster relief efforts, supported operation Enduring Freedom and supported operations involving protecting nuclear weapons at sea. After military separation I pursued the entertainment industry for sound design for video and video games. While earning that degree I delivered for a food service website and operated dispatch via web application. Today I am a school bus driver looking to find a more fulfilling and challenging career as a web development.
